

Paper

Ink

Pen green

Ink red

Your words. Your call.

A useful desktop writing tool with a human signature. The print-like name, wandering green pen line and red ink dot give ByAuthorX a human signature.

Identity system / Product aesthetic / Marketing direction

A working manuscript

Warm, deliberate and personal. A capable word processor with the feeling of a page someone has actually worked on.

01 Authored

Show the writer's choices: a draft, an edit, a passage kept. The pen line carries the eye through the work; the red dot gives it a human point of origin.

02 Useful

Give everyday documents the same attention as manuscripts. Letters, resumes, reports and press kits belong here alongside essays and longer writing.

03 Calm

Keep the writing surface clear. Expressive graphics belong in a cover, welcome screen or campaign; everyday actions need familiar labels and consistent geometry.

Marketing character

Large ink headlines, generous paper margins, one green gesture and one red mark.

Product character

Clean sans-serif controls, a white document page, quiet paper-toned chrome and review panels opened when needed.

A signature with room to breathe

Use the approved color logo as one complete piece. The underline, loop and red terminal are part of its geometry.

Clear space and size

Leave half the capital B height around the entire mark, including the dot and loop. Use the full logo at 240 px wide or larger. In print, start at 50 mm and proof a physical sample.

Approved alternatives

Use the single-ink or white master when color cannot reproduce clearly. The reversed color logo is for dark ink surfaces. Keep proportions; use the SVG rather than retyping the name.

Small spaces: X and loop icon; simplified X and red dot at 16–32 px. These are supporting marks; the full name leads introductions.

Paper, ink and two pen colors

The C4.2 logo colors stay exact. Supporting neutrals and a deeper green make the system practical for everyday screens.

Paper #F4EEE3
Main brand canvas

Ink #252927
Primary text

Pen green #367B6C
Logo and gestures

Ink red #AD283E
Signature dot

Page #FFFCF7
Panels and cards

Rule #D7D0C3
Quiet separators

Readable combinations

Ink on paper 12.76:1 · Red on paper 5.77:1 · White on green 4.99:1
Use deep green #246052 for small text on paper (6.34:1); logo green on paper is 4.32:1.

Print character, everyday clarity

Three clear roles keep the literary identity from becoming a decorative interface.

A sentence worth keeping.

IM Fell English Regular / Display headings and short quotations
Suggested web display: 48–80 px, 1.1 line height. Use sentence case; let the rough edges stay visible.

Review the changes. Keep your voice.

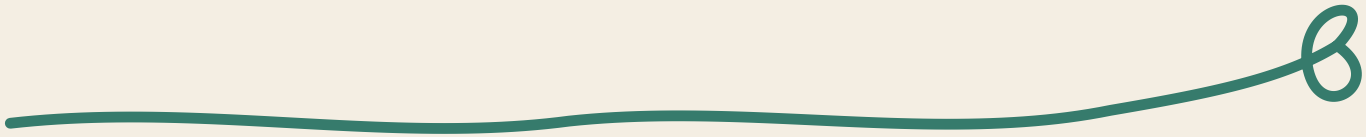

Manrope Regular and Semibold / Interface, body copy and labels
Body: 16–18 px, 1.5 line height. UI labels: 14–16 px. Use weight and spacing before adding color.

The next day I return to the page.

Source Serif 4 Regular / Reading specimens and optional document styles
Reading: 18–22 px, 1.55 line height. Authors choose their own document typography.

The marks of a working page

Use one pen gesture to support the content. Make the imperfection repeatable by using the supplied vector masters.

Green pen line

Let it travel under a headline or connect a passage to an annotation. Preserve the open loop and slight wave. Use one major stroke per composition; do not weave lines through body text.

Red ink dot

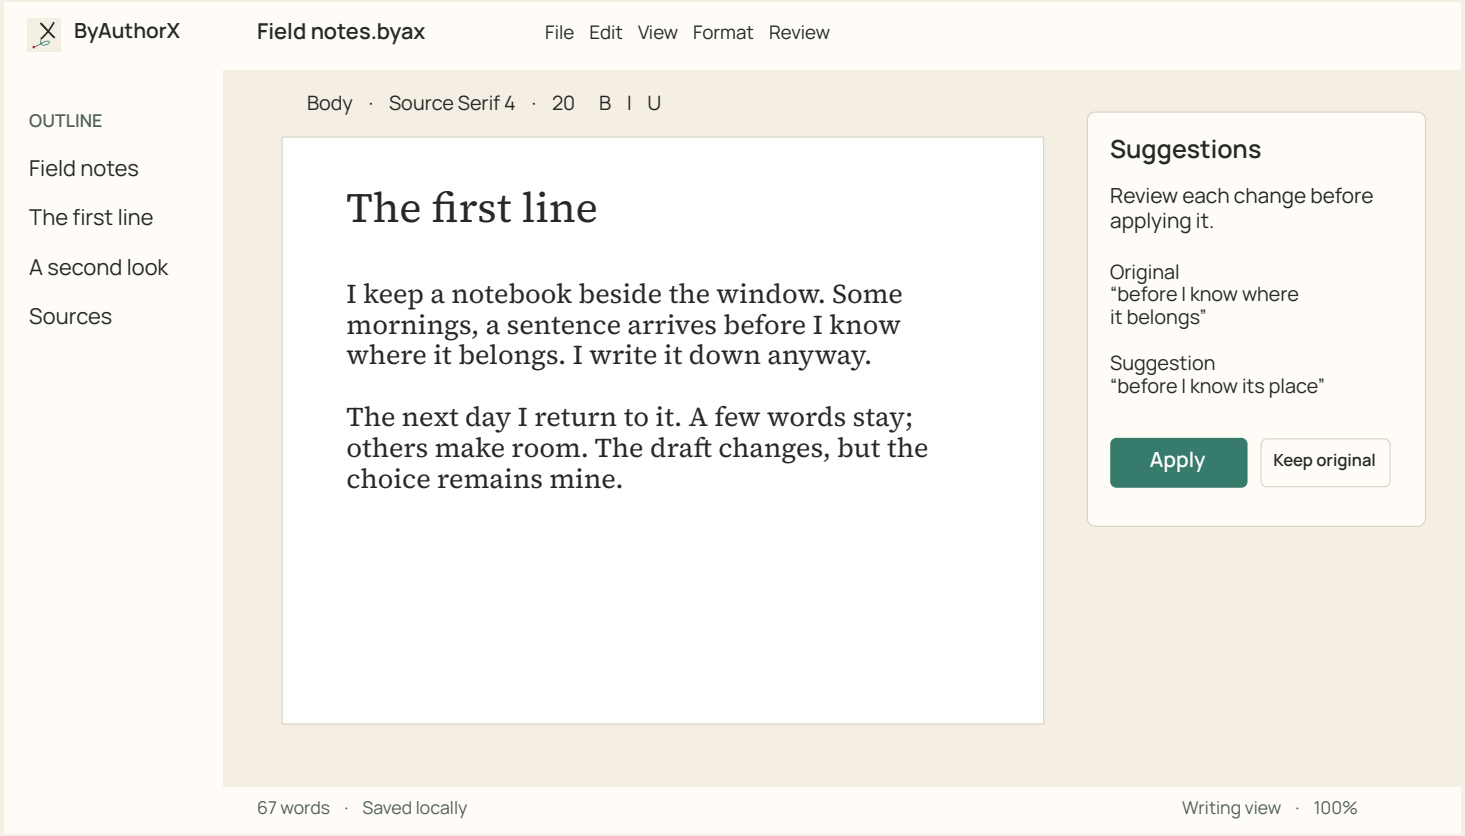

Use the irregular filled mark, with its small fleck, as a signature or a single editorial emphasis. Do not replace it with a perfect circle. Outside the logo, add a second red dot only when it has a clear purpose.

Imagery and surface

Favor actual document excerpts, working pages, notes and hands at work. Keep paper grain very faint in marketing backgrounds. Reading pages, controls and exported documents stay clean.

A quiet place to write

Native desktop concept: expressive identity at the edge, ordinary writing controls at the center.

Interface rules

8 px spacing rhythm.
6–8 px control corners.
1 px quiet borders.
White writing page.
2 px deep-green focus ring.

Use text and icons with state colors. Keep error red distinct from decorative red ink.

Lead with the writer's choices

Suggested message: a writing space that keeps the author in charge. Show the decision behind the final words.

Campaign structure

Use a short headline, a document moment and a small signature.
Let the green line connect the thought to the page.
Keep red ink to one deliberate accent.

Demonstrate the promise

Show an original sentence beside a proposed edit, followed by the author's decision. Rotate essays, letters, resumes and reports so the brand communicates a full word processor.

Example copy

"Your words. Your call."
"Review the suggestion. Keep what works."
"From first line to a page you can share."

Campaign examples illustrate the specified product direction; they are not a launch announcement.

Make the system easy to keep

The identity stays consistent when the same assets, type roles and color tokens are reused.

Voice

Direct, thoughtful and specific. Talk about writing and the author's choices. Use practical verbs: write, review, keep, change, save. Explain assistance as an option the writer controls.

Use this kind of language

"Review this suggestion."
"Keep the original."
"Saved locally."

Avoid "perfect writing" and "AI writes for you."

Implementation

Use the included CSS and JSON tokens. Warm paper is the brand background, not a forced document color. Primary buttons use green with white text; small green text uses the deeper tone. Pair every status with a label or icon.

Files and source

Logos: SVG, PNG, PDF and Vixl masters.
Graphics: editable pen line and ink dot.
Examples: desktop editor and social concept.
Fonts: open-license files and notices.

Product basis: ByAuthorX specification v1.0, October 13, 2026, github.com/jxburros/ByAuthorX.